

Intikabur Rahman's Poems

Issue: Vol. V, No. 2, August-October, 2026

Love's Heart

I saw charm
In the disappointed eyes
Where heart stumbled over.
The silent smile
Pinched the heart
Love's heart.

Boundary

Even the dream has a limit
The waking world sets the boundary.
You may ride the moon
And read out poems in a dream
But you cannot become the moon itself.
If you fail to understand
You become Duryodhan dreaming of the throne
Pretending not see Bhishma on the bed of arrows

Translated by Ananda Bormudoi

Intikabur Rahman is a medical practitioner and a poet who has been writing poems for the last three decades. He has published two collections of poems.